Doherty testified that at this time the sik looms are 80 per cent. efficient. A weaver works only when a loom is standng still, he said, and that means only bout two hours of actual work each day. He said that before the strike his company offered to turn over to its employees its mills at Lake View and Paterson and let them share in the profits if the com-pany was allowed 5 per cent. on its capital invested. The employees tried it for a while, he said, but didn't like the system and went back to the old order of things. Doherty said that before the strike the our loom men were making big money and the first indication of trouble came when the two loom hands demanded the end of the four loom system.

"I believe," he said, "that this commission or the Government should fix a uniform scale of wages, and this would do away with much of the present trouble. My father and I favor the eight hour work day, providing it can be made effective all over the country."

Doherty asserted that the average wages in his firm's mill from the highest to the lowest amounts to $16 a week. Adolph told the investigators that the W. W. adherents had 9,000 adherents in the strike, but now has an actual membership of only 1,400. Shortly after the robbery she began to be worried by queries from her friends, such as "Didn't you get that necklace I sent you for Christmas?" and Mrs. Mc-Vickar would have to explain why it was that she had neglected to acknowledge receiving the present. Then she began a systematic canvass of her friends and ob-tained a list of the things sent her. By inquiry at jewellers' she learned that her

William A. Prendergast as one of three gast himself had just made a speech trying to dictate a ticket to the Republi-cans. When Mr. Wickersham spoke of him for Governor there was more handclapping than was evoked by the reference to agree on his friend, Mr. Whitman.

Mr. Prendergast told the club how good it felt to be back "by the old home fire-of the Republican party."

Mr. Prendergast was cheered when he said the thing for the Republicans to do was to go about their business in the old way.

larger than the Colonel.

They say outright that if the Colonel gives in things will be fine and dandy, but if he doesn't fur will fly. Mr. Bird did not say last night whose fur would do the flying.

As a preliminary to the struggle which is sure to come with Col. Roosevelt the Progressives in this city are getting ready to ease Theodore Douglas Robinson from the State chairmanship. The talk heard everywhere is that Chairman Robinson is so close to his uncle, the Colonel, that if
